

Conversations on Creativity

Join members of creative industries at these free events as they share challenges and opportunities learned from generating ideas and putting them into practice

Tuesday, June 16

Maxine Turner

President at Cuisine Unlimited and the US Welcome Pavilion

Seeing a gap in hospitality at the Turin Olympics, Maxine Turner developed a hospitality program, the US Welcome Pavilion, which will represent the United States at international events. This program will debut in Rio de Janeiro in 2016 during the summer Olympics. Turner will talk about how she came to recognize the need and the creative methods she has used over the last four years to make it a reality.

Tuesday, June 23

Angela Brown

Editor at SLUG Magazine

Angela H. Brown will talk about nurturing the creative spirit. She has run SLUG Magazine since September of 2000. Since then, she has taken a small black & white zine and turned it into a full-color electrobrite magazine with a strong regional presence. Brown has brought back coverage on Utah's deserving local music scene, Utah's action sports community and continues to give exposure to prominent underground national bands. In 2009, Brown launched Craft Lake City, an alternative art and crafts festival showcasing DIY handmade goods held at the Gallivan Center annually. In 2010, Craft Lake City officially became its own entity, making Brown now at the helm of two businesses.

Tuesday, June 30

Sandra Ence

Textile artist and instructor at the Fashion Institute at the Salt Lake Community College

Everyone has creative potential. With our Conversation on Creativity, participants will be encouraged and supported to uncover their own creativity. Bring a journal to jot down ideas. As we explore moving through the creative process, the conversation will guide the exploration with this process suggesting specific projects designed to assist individuals in identifying inspirations and to actualize concepts into existence. The creative process can be applied to any medium.
